

Sinclair Broadcast Group's recent actions have illustrated the dangers of distorting news coverage according to ideological bias caused by media consolidation.

Sinclair has used the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we citizens get more of what's good for their bottom line (or ideology) and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
